Dangers of a Cold and How to Avoid Them.

More fatalities have their origin in or result from a cold than from any other cause. This fact alone should make people more careful as there is no danger whatever from a cold when properly treated in the beginning. For many years Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been recognized as the most prompt and effective medicine in use for this disease. It acts on nature's plan, loosens the cough, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthful condition. Sold by L. L. Elgin and Anderson & Fowler, the up-to-date druggists at Hopkinsville.

Of Waverly, Tex., writes: "Of a morning, when first arising, I often find a troublesome collection of phlegm which produces a cough and is very hard to dislodge; but a small quantity of Ballard's Horehound Syrup will at once dislodge it, and the trouble is over. I know of no medicine that is equal to it, and it is so pleasant to take. I can most cordially recommend it to all persons needing a medicine for throat or lung trouble." Sold by Cook &

ONLY JIM

MR. ELSIE D. GALE

"O H, Aunt Ellen, is it really you?
Well, this is a surprise, and you don't know how glad I am to see you," exclaimed Gertrude, as she opened the door. "Do come right in. You must excuse the way I look," she continued, apologetically, as she glanced down at her torn wrapper; "I've been housecleaning this afternoon, and I thought I wouldn't dress for supper, as long as there'd be only Jim. We'll come right upstairs, and you can rest while I make myself respectable."

The elder lady followed her upstairs to a pretty, daintily furnished room.
"There," exclaimed the young wife as she set down her guest's umbrella and valise, "this is my guest room.
How do you like it?"

Her aunt surveyed the room approvingly.

"Very nice, indeed," was her comment. "The pink paper is lovely, and those ruffled curtains are as pretty as can be. That's just what I like, a nice easy chair and footstool, and I'm so tired I'll try it right away."

"I have a number of my wedding presents in here," continued the younger woman. "Jim's grandmother gave me the hemstitched sheets and pillow cases and shams. That Madonna over the bed I guess you remember. Lucy Wheeler gave it to me. Those etchings were presents, too. Uncle John gave me the rocker. Jim bought the chiffonier last spring, and I made the scarf and the pink pin-cushion. His sister embroidered that apple blossom pillow for me; she does such lovely work. Now I'll go and dress, and you rest till supper time, for there's an hour yet."

An hour later they sat at the supper table, at which Gertrude, in a pretty sprigged lawn dress, presided. The beefsteak was done to a turn, the biscuits were delicately browned, the cut-glass dish of peaches was flanked by a pitcher of rich cream. In the center of the table stood a low bowl of pink and white sweet peas, harmonizing with the delicate china.

Jim, as he took his place at the head of the table, glanced at his wife with mingled surprise and approbation.

"How pretty you look in that dress, Gertie, with your hair all fluffy. I always liked that blue dress, and what a fine supper you've gotten for us, hasn't she, Aunt Ellen?"

His wife flushed with pleasure at the unwonted praise.

"I thought I would get out all my nice china and best tablecloth in honor of auntie," she explained, "and I found just a few blossoms on the sweet peas for a centerpiece. I haven't had this china out for a good while. You see there's only Jim and the children at supper, so it really isn't worth while."

After the meal was over, the dishes

"ONLY JIM" IS ALL THE WORLD TO ME.

washed and the two children in bed, the aunt and niece sat together on the porch, while Jim excused himself to go to the post office for the mail.

"Before I go to bed, Gertie," said her aunt, "I'm going to get you to play something for me. I always liked your playing. Don't you remember how I did?" Gertrude shook her head. "Oh, I can't play a tune through now," she admitted, reluctantly; "I don't really have time for my music. I'm sorry, too, for Jim's real fond of music, but somehow I've gotten my hand out, so I rarely touch the piano now. You see I have so much sewing for the children to do, and the housework, so the time goes."

The week of Aunt Ellen's stay passed rapidly, and the day before her departure she sat upon the piazza assisting her niece in the task of darning stockings.

"Well, Gertrude," observed the elder lady, as she critically examined a well-worn heel, "you seem to be pretty well fixed. Jim is a fine fellow, the children are real good, and you've got a nice cozy little home."

There was no reply, and she was surprised to see a tear trickle down the young wife's face and fall upon the blue sock she was mending.

"Why, what's the matter, child? Has anything gone wrong?"

"Oh, nothing," replied her niece, hastily, as she wiped her eyes. "It's only, well, I've got a good notion to tell you all about it. I never meant to tell a living soul, but I'm not happy, though I suppose I ought to be."

"Why, what's the trouble, little girl?"

Gertrude bent lower over her work.

"Well, auntie, I've always said I hated a jealous wife, and I know Jim loves me better than anyone else. But he doesn't seem to care about staying at home any more, and lots of times he goes over to the Deane's to spend the evening. I can't go, for I can't leave the children alone in the house. But sometimes I sit here, and think of you and your husband, and wonder if you're really happy. There," she said with a little catch in her voice, "I didn't mean to tell anyone, but it doesn't seem loyal to Jim.

He's real good to me, and he's got everything he can afford, but I feel like I'm getting old and faded." She wiped her eyes and took in the blue sock again.

"I don't see why you should feel happy about his going out in the evenings," replied her aunt, calmly, "as long as it's only Jim."

Gertrude dropped the ball of darning cotton in her surprise.

"Why, what do you mean?" she asked, astonished.

"My dear child," replied her aunt, kindly, "during the week I have been here, I don't know how many times I have heard you use the expression: 'Only Jim.' You didn't always trouble to make yourself pretty for supper, because there was only Jim. You didn't take particular pains about setting the table attractively, because it was only for Jim. I noticed that while the guest room was really artistic, yours was plain and unattractive, because it was only for Jim. My dear girl," she continued, "Jim is the dearest one on earth to you and the most important. I can remember when he used to come and call on you before you were married, how you used to fix yourself up for him, and look so pretty and sweet when he came to call. Now you are just as good looking as you ever were, only you just want to cultivate a little of the care you used to take of your personal appearance. I know it makes a difference when you are doing your own work, but Jim would be delighted if you would always take pains to look fresh and dainty when he came home."

"Don't wear wrappers to do your work in; they are for invalids. A shirtwaist and a washable skirt are much neater and trimmer. Then about your music.
I can remember how you used to play for Jim to sing, and how he enjoyed it. Take up your music again, even if it is only for ten minutes a day, and you'll soon be able to play his accompaniments again.
Maybe it seems odd to you to hear an old maid like me giving advice about husbands, but I have lived a good bit longer than you, my dear, and I've used my powers of observation. A great deal of this world's happiness is based on trifles, or what appear to be trifles.
Now," she concluded, "I think I've preached enough, but I think if you take my advice you'll be happier."

Gertrude threaded a needle meditatively.

"Well," she said, after a moment's reflection, "I believe you are right, auntie. I have felt as if as long as I was Jim's wife, and he loved me, it didn't make any particular difference.
So I wasn't always particular about fixing myself up when he came home from the store. But I'll try your plan, and I'll take up my music. I love Jim dearly, and I didn't want to feel that he was growing away from me."

As her aunt left on the following morning, Gertrude bade her an affectionate good-by.

"I'm so glad you came, auntie," she said, "for you don't know how I've enjoyed your visit."

"Yes, indeed," corroborated her husband. "Gertie has looked ten years younger since you've been here. I suppose it is rather dull for her here with just me and the children."

As the stage drove away Gertrude turned to her husband and slipped her hand in his.

"Don't say 'only me,' dear," she said, "for don't you know that you are the one person in the world for me? I know I've gotten careless and haven't taken pains as I should, but I'm going to do better, for 'only Jim' is all the world to me."—N. Y. Observer.

WHERE TENNESSEANS GO

Texas and Arkansas Get Most of Those Who Leave the State.

The last census report, made in the year 1900, gives some interesting figures showing the contributions made by Tennesseans to the population of other states and territories. That report shows that there were, when the census of that year was taken, 2,392,- 885 persons in the United States who were born in the state of Tennessee.
The entire population in this state, including those not born here, was 2,020,616. We mention a few states that show in their population a large number of native Tennesseans:

Alabama.....	31,607	Mississippi.....	22,384
Arkansas.....	84,644	Missouri.....	34,912
Georgia.....	11,965	Texas.....	120,339
Illinois.....	32,471	Kansas.....	14,799
Kentucky.....	69,500	Indiana.....	11,284

These are some of the states to which Tennessee has contributed largely to swelling their population; but they are by no means all. When the census was taken there were 13,149 Tennesseans in Indian territory. In New York there were 2,813 of them, and there was not a state in the union or a territory in which there were not persons who were born in Tennessee.

Of course the loss of native population was made up in some degree by the presence here of men and women who were born in other states. While Tennessee contributed 2,513 to the population of New York, there were in this state 4,093 that were born in New York. But while this state contributed to the population of Illinois, that state contributed to the population of this only 6,707. But the showing of this state in comparison with Texas is the worst; while we had in our population when the census was taken only 694 native Texans, Texas showed up with 130,389 persons born in Tennessee as shown above. We had 19,496 persons born in the state of Arkansas, but Arkansas had 84,644 born in Tennessee.
There is scarcely a western state in which there is not a large number of Tennesseans.
